OPEC deadlocked over prices

GENEVA, March 26 (R)--Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani said tonight the OPEC states were "almost deadlocked" on the issue of oil price increases. After several hours of discussions at a consultative meeting of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). Sheikh Yamani said some delegations were adopting "very extreme positions." Sheikh Yamani said some OPEC members were demanding a price increase of 35 per cent or more. "The Saudi position is unchanged. It is to stay with the Abu Dhabi prices," he said, The Saudi minister was referring to OPEC price rises decided in Abu Dhabi last December. These would mean a 14.5 per cent increase over the whole of 1979, with the new price boost due on April 1. OPEC ministers adjourned their meeting until tomorrow without deciding whether to turn it into an extraordinary conference -- a procedural change which would enable them to increase prices.

Although most Egyptians went about their business as usual, authorities were carrying out rigorous identity and baggage checks at all ports and at Cairo airport. Road blocks were set up on all routes into the capital and armed police ringed foreign embassies.

Most Egyptians, their hopes alternately raised and dashed during 16 months of often bitter negotiation with Israel, are bored with the issue and the main talk in the coffee shops was more about the latest football match than

Only hours before Egypt signed the controversial separate peace treaty with Israel, President Sadat's National Democratic Party appealed today to other Arab countries to join Egypt in forging a Middle East peace.

In an apparent attempt to placate Arabs embittered by Egypt's decision to sign the treaty, the statement listed some of the benefits it had achieved. These included the agreement for Israel to withdraw from the Sinai Peninsula and other occupied Arab territories and provisions for Palestinian autonomy.

So what?

SO IT is done, with all the pseudo-historical pomp and self-congratulation that we would have expected. Now

It is clear that the treaty signed last night in Washington does not usher in an era of peace and brotherhood in the Middle East. We say this not because we do not seek peace. but because we do.

We feel that the three leaders who sat smugly on the north lawn of the White House yesterday amid the strains of martial music and demonstrators' chants are deluding themselves. President Carter demonstrated the depths of this delusion in his naive appeal for the "support and cooperation" of the Arab leaders whom he seeks to lure into the "peace process." How can we--Jordanians and Palestinians, for example--whose acquiescence is sought in a process for which we are expected to give much but from which we are assured nothing--join President Sadat in sit-ting beside a man who, as Mr. Begin did last night, says he comes from the "land of Zion and Jerusalem" or who rejoices that the second happiest day of his life (the first being the day of the establishment of Israel in Palestine) was the day "Jerusalem became one city"?

How can we seriously be expected to have faith in this process when President Sadat chose to omit what he had planned to say at the ceremony, that yesterday's treaty marked the first step on the road towards Palestinian "self-determination and statehood," presumably because the man to his left at the table swore on the blood of his forefathers less than a week ago that there would never. ever be such a thing?

It is not enough that the papers signed in Washington yesterday should provide for the Israeli withdrawal from Sinai--and even that in a piecemeal fashion. Is this -- the return by thieves of the stolen property--the great breakthrough which the West is hailing today?

We, as victims ourselves of occupation, do not begrudge the great Egyptian people their fervent desire to retrieve their stolen land or to live in peace. We do not, in fact, wish to destroy what may have been accomplished in the past 18 months.

But the true victims of Israeli aggression and expansionism--the two constant determinants of the Middle East reality today, which have continued unabated, in the occupied territories and in southern Lebanon, even as the "peace process" has unfolded--gain nothing from this treaty. Nothing, that is, except perhaps a hardened resolve to regain what is rightfully ours: our land, our dignity and our national rights in Palestine. This is not a process which begins or ends with summits or negotiations or treaties. It is a prerogative that can be regained only through unity and vigilance and struggle.

The treaties signed yesterday have married the unabating phenomenon of Zionist aggression with the fateful apparatus of conspiracy. The totality of Arab rights, particularly regarding the sacred soil of Jerusalem, remain unfulfilled--even unaddressed--by this treaty. Nothing in the treaty or its annexes will dislodge the occupiers from the soil of the Palestinian homeland: if Israel's interpretation prevails, in fact, the "autonomy" provisions for the West Bank and Gaza will do just the opposite, as yesterday's well-timed creation of Jewish "local councils" for the West Bank settlers amply demonstrates.

Mr. Begin cited yesterday's events as a cause for rejoicing. That alone is sufficient to give us pause.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

UNDER THE HEADING "The Sadat--Begin Coalition" AL RA'l Monday says that the signing by President Sadat of a separate peace treaty with Israel has brought about a new setback for the Arabs, however, the paper continues, it is not shameful to suffer a setback; what is shameful is for us to give the setback a chance to turn us into a submissive nation.

On the day of signing the pact, the paper adds. His Majesty King Hussein, leaves for Damascus and Baghdad in order to study the situation with the purpose of finding the best method to confront the destructive outcome of President Sadar's negative attitude toward his national commitments.

His Majesty is doing his best to ensure Arab steadfastness, and build up the indigenous Arab strength which will be capable of dealing with the new variables in the Arab world. The unity among Amman. Damascus and Baghdad is a necessity imposed by the grave circumstances and challenges which our nation is facing.

The fact that our enemies covet our resources demands that all Arabs coordinate their efforts to forestall the fall of the new Arab front. The Arabs will not be able to counter the challenges unless they stick together. A day will come when our nation must prove that it is greater and stronger than all challenges and coalitions, AL DUSTOUR says that never have the Arabs witnessed a crisis, or suffered a defeat so bitter as the one which President Sadat is trying to impose on them by yielding to the will of the Zionist enemy. By signing a peace treaty with Israel, Sadat is committing a sin which history will neither forget nor forgive. The Egyptian people will nevertheless wipe out the stain of shame and restore Egypt to the Arab fold. We must prove, the paper continues, that we are much stronger than Sadat thinks, that we are capable of imposing peace which will restore our rights, and those of the Palestinians.

This day marks the fall of the Egyptian regime. At the same time it is a day of great testing the Arabs. What Sadat has done and not divert our attention from the dangers yet to come. The Arabs will not only have to face Israel, but also an Arab regime which has decided to align itself with the enemy, the paper says. Therefore, it is our duty to mobilise ourselves, and transform the defeat which Sadat is trying to impose on the Arabs into a victory. The future is full of challenges and we must not fail the great test, the paper concludes.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

A non-Arab on Camp David

The peace treaty between Egypt and Israel is signed under the watchful eye of the peacemaker-President Jimmy Carter. This occasion demands prolonged applause from the nations of the world because it is the realisation of a great human cause. But alas! There is a silence, a sort of regretful disposition among most of the leaders of other countries, not to mention the Arab World.

It is the cause, and surely it is the cause that the treaty signed at Washington consecutive to two Camp David summits, and the special peace-making mission of President Carter, is not relatively signed for peace. It is signed for further interference in the peace of Palestinian people. The masked "angels of peace" have gathered for so long only to destroy peace, and pervert the life of the Palestinians to direful segregation.

Are the Palestinians not born free? Are they not part of humanity? Do they not have the right to live a pious and peaceful life? All these questions, and even more, rise up in the mind of any reasonable man. The long, distorted life of the Palestinians be speaks the truth that they have always been found in chains, after their birth. They have not been given a chance for selfdetermination. The continued occupation by Israel of the lands of the Palestinian people attributes to Israel's homogeneous plans for colonisation, evidently similar to that of the Middle Ages.

And, the peace treaty is hardly going to change this situation of the Palestinians because the persons who have signed the treaty are ill-qualified for the real task which definitely calls for intervention by other Arab nations who still suffer from the aftermath of the 1967 war. In fact, the question of Palestinian people has always been camouflaged with a set purpose of achieving territorial qualification for Egypt and Israel only. Moreover, Egypt and Israel, along with the human rights' prophet Mr. Carter, have in mind the eventual disintegration of the whole Arab world, as well. This treaty, of course, is only a quack remedy to worsen the ill-effects of the Israeli-occupied lands and their real owners.

Mr. Sadat had categorically remarked earlier that the real course of peace starts with signing of the treaty. But let us be beware of this course. Let the Middle East countries forget all their differences of opinion, and cooperate fully with determination and consistent interaction to face this piecemeal treaty and its consequent dangers.

Because the cry of the Palestinian people and their freedom from Zionist aggression still remains just a voice heard in the wilderness.

the Ministry of Tourism, during AMMAN, March 26 -- A work stoppage was observed throughout Jordan today between 11 a.m. and noon as planned by all professional associations, labour unions, the government, women's organisations and the Save Jerusalem Committee in protest against the signature of the peace treaty between Egypt and

Israel in Washington tonight. Telecommunications between

Jordan and the outside world were ! halted in accordance with the govemments decision yesterday to express the rejection by the Jordanian people of the separate peace treaty.

No classes were held today at the University of Jordan in protest of the treaty. Speeches were delivered by students, professors and Dr. Nasserdine Al Assad, president of the university, during a student rally held at 11 a.m. in the Samir Rifai auditorium. Speakers called for Arab unity, the implementation of the Baghdad summit's resolutions, the awakening of the Arab masses, as well as warning against the conspiracy of creating a substitute for a Palestinian state.

The Jordanian government yesterday issued the following state-

"In expression of Arab rejection of the separate peace agreement to be signed by President Sadat, and in honour of the Arab nation's martyrs who died in defence of Jerusalem, and as a pledge by us to our people in the occupied Arab territories to continue to support their steadfastness in the face of conspiracies and endeavours for liberation from Zionist rule, the Jordanian government announces that work will stop in government departinstitutions for one hour from eleven o'clock to twelve noon on Monday.

The government, while emphasising the role of national cohesion in the face of conspiracies against the Arab nation, realises that the closing of ranks on the domestic front and unity of the Arab people in the face of such conspiracies are the most effective weapons to repulse them with.

The government on this occasion pays tribute to the martyrs of Egypt who died in defence of the Arab nation and its dignity. It also realises that this is only a passing cloud over Egypt and trusts in the steadfastness, unity and vigilance of the Egyptian people in the face of the conspiracies being hatched against them, trying to divert them from their true course to the benefit of the invaders and conspirators.

'The government on this occasion renews its allegiance to His Majesty King Hussein who inherited the leadership of the great Arab revolt. It pledges to follow his direction which was determined in cooperation with other, faithful Arab leaders to foil plans of capitulation and to build up indigenous Arab strength. Finally, the government calls the people to be vigilant and beware all attempts at dissension. and appeals to the Arab nation to persevere in its steadfastness and to exert all efforts to achieve Arab ments and public and various solidarity and greater Arab strength.

German duet delights Haya Centre audience

By Fawzia Mai Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN, March 26--Violinist Detley Grevesmuehl and pianist Ulrich Meckies received a warm reception at the Haya Arts Centre tonight despite the vagaries of the weather and the signature of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty in Washington which had a generally depressing influence on everything.

For a short while, this morning it looked like the concert might be cancelled. I wondered whether the audience at the Haya Arts Centre tonight would have to listen to a protracted rendition of John Cage's composition entitled 4'33"in which a musician sits at the piano for four minutes and 33 seconds and does nothing. Fortunately, Dr. Richard Schmied of the Goethe Institute--after a morning's panic -- finally confirmed that the concert would still

In an interview with the Jordan Times as both artists were rehearsing just before the concert, the handsome and self-confident Mr. Grevesmuehl described their reception in Baghdad, the first leg of a tour sponsored by the Goethe Institute which will take them to Damascus and Doha after Amman: "It was a magnificent concert; the audience was enthusiastic. Everybody loved us." He added with a smile: "We even got a re-engagement to play again in Iraq."

That was a taste of things to

The programme, exclusively Beethoven, presented three sonatas for violin and piano; Op. 12 no. 3, the Spring Sonata (no. 5, in F Major) and the Sonata to Kreutzer (no. 9 in A Major). Mr. Grevesmuehl explained this choice of programme on the grounds that "Beethoven is one of the greatest German composers, actually one of the best in the world. Although these three works are all sonatas, yet they're quite different in style and mood." Beethoven's ten sonatas for violin and piano are relatively young works, all written between 1798 and 1804 except for the last one, which was written in 1812. They need to be appreciated with a different ear and judgment than his well-known symphonies, his piano sonatas and his string quartets. They do not express his symphonies' dramatic tragedies--"fate knocking at the door"--nor his string quartets' intimacy. They are rather "a series of snapshots which came only in happy moments," in the words of French music critic Philippe Andriot.

Betley Grevenmel - Violin

The sonata Op. 47 was dedicated to the French violinist Rodolphe Kreutzer, whom Beethoven came to know in Vienna. However, Kreutzer himself never wanted to play the work. He found it "outrageously unintelligible" to quote Berlioz. Others even criticised Beethoven of practising "artistic terrorism" on account of this sonata.

However, the Kreutzer Sonata remains not only most famous of Beethoven's piano and violin sonatas but also the best. It is the one in which Beethoven finally succeeds "in blending the dialogue between the violin and the piano into a homogeneous and indissociable whole." For Beethoven was, ultimately, a pianist more than any thing else. His violin playing used to "make the flies and spiders flee," as he himself described it.

As Mr. Grevesmuehl puts it: "The piano and the violin each get 50 per cent of the music in the Kreutzer. In the other sonatas, the piano often gets 70 per cent and the violin ends up with only 30 per cent. However, he certainly managed to appear for more than 30 per cent of the show.

Their playing tonight showed neither the strain nor the weariness of their travel. Ulrich Meckies, professor-like and with typicaly German phlegm, stressed the difficulty he had in getting accustomed to the different pianos he encountered. And, he added with a significant nod: "They are usually fairly bad,"

Both musicians put on a top grade performance. The breathtaking pianissimo in the sonata no. 3 not only enhanced the audience's religious silence but demonstrated perfect timing

The so-called Spring Sonata. though Beethoven never named it so, received an impromptu though appropriate illustration in the form of a spring shower. This was partly due to the poor acoustical architecture of the Hava Centre's concert hall. The second movement, a dagio molto espressive, was ushered in by a spatter of rain. And the adagio's final peaceful sinking into a mysterious slumber sank instead into an outbreak of thunder.

The concert was nonetheless very successful. The audience was generous with its applause, providing the first two sonatas with a curtain call each and the Kreutzer with two.

PERTH, Australia, March 26 (R) -- Australia remained in control of the second and final cricket test against Pakistan here today but may have batted too laboriously to win the match. The six-hour day produced only 166 runs. Australia added 147 to their overnight score of 180 for three before being all out midway through the final session and Pakistan then struggled at the start of their innings after Majid Khan fell to Rodney Hoggs eighth ball for nought. ### Traffic hazards range in Yugoslav BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, March 24 (AP)-With something less than high hopes they're trying again to take some of the death defying thrill out of driving in Yugosiavia.

It's the latest round in a so-far losing battle with slivovitzfuelled drivers, suicidal passers, groggy foreigners and Balkan

'We couldn't even force our own instructors to wear seat belts, to be an example to the students. says Jovan Desnica, head of Red Signal, the country's biggest driving school.

"Last year, a record 5,384 people were killed," says Hija Jovovic of the Yugoslav Interior Secretariat. "This is too high a blood tax to pay."

Some 40,000 people have been killed and more than half a million injured in the last nine years on Yugoslavia's mostly two-lane, frequently battered and usually over loaded roads. Horse carts try to survive among cars, and cars compete against some of Europe's most concentrated truck traffic. Belgrade itself is one of the chief danger spots, a maze of one-way streets and ego-testing circles. A city of 1.3 million people, it is crowded with 250,000 automobiles, as many cars as it had humans 40 years ago. Pedestrians run across exprassways, cars across walkways, and gypsy windshield washers dash into the traffic on downtown Marshal Tito street.

Desnica says Belgrade traffic kills the equivalent of a classroom of children a year but even more frequent victims are elderly pedestrians who can't move fast enough to save them-

Outside town is Yugoslavia's infamours highway to Zagreb, a 390-kilometre two-lane endurance test that is the only direct east-west route through the country.

Domestic drivers compete with disastrous results with each other and practically all truck traffic rolling between Western Europe and Turkey and the Near East, an endless double col-umns of heavy transports from West Germany, France and

A recent count showed remnants of 77 burned and demolished vehicles along the highway.

Survivors hav erected uncounted scores of monuments to dead relatives, leaving wreaths tied to trees and posts to mark the spots where they were killed.

The road is a main route for hundreds of thousands of Turks, Greeks and Yugoslavs who commute seasonally to and from jobs in Western Europe in backbreaking and deadly nonstop migrations.

Belorade's Turkish embassy tends orphans from the highway, and Yugoslavs tell stories of foreign workers rocketing along the road with a brick on the accelerator of their over-

CAPE TOWN, March 26 (R)-South Africa's parliamentary opposition today launches an unprecedented campaign to impeach President John Vorster, who is accused by his former information minister Mr. Connie Mulder of acquiescing in secret "slush fund" projects. The main point in Dr. Mulder's statement was an allegation that Mr. Vorster and Senator Horwood knew of the government's secret funding of the progovernment newspaper, the Citizen, long before they have admitted they did.

Big majority in OPEC said to favour new oil price increase

GENEVA, March 26 (R)-An overwhelming majority of OPEC states today emerged in favour of an immediate oil price increase beyond levels already set for this year.

Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani told reporters at the start of OPEC talks here that his country would do its best to resist pressures to increase the price of a standard barrel of OPEC oil beyond the $13.843, the level officially due to take effect on April 1. But a Reuter count of delegates filing into the opening session of the conference showed that 11 out of the 13 ministers favoured an immediate increase.

The conference between the oil ministers of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) has been called to discuss the repercussions of shortages in oil markets caused by the slowdown in Iranian production.

Last December OPEC set a price increase to take place in four stages, which would mean a 14.5 per cent increase for the whole of 1979. Prices are due to rise 3.8 per cent on April 1 as part of this

But Oatar Oil Minister Sheikh Abdul Aziz Khalif Khalifa Al Dhani told Reuter the time was ripe for a new price increase. He said the market would easily absorb such an increase.

Itani Öü Minister Tayeh Abdel-Karim told reporters some states were pressing for the whole 14.5 rise to take effect immediately rather than into the fourth quarter of this year.

Mr. Karim called for a reasonable increase in oil prices to offset the effects of inflation, and he also hinted that the Arab oil countries could use oil as a weapon to penish participants in the Egypt-Israel peace treaty. "We are against a high jump (in oil prices). We want a reasonable increase." Mr. Karim told reporters today. "There is no connection between Camp David (where the Egypt-Israel peace treaty was largely negotiated with United States backing and prices." Mr. Karim said.

But he indicated that production cuts could be imposed to penalise countries involved. "We have to punish anyone who works against our legitimate rights, the Iraqi minister said.

The Iraqi minister specifically unacked Egyptien President Anwar Sadat for his role in the peace treaty with Israel. "If Sadat is going to do this we will treat him as one who is going against our rights," Mr. Kanm said.

On prices the minister said: "What we want is compensation for the loss of our income. Anyhow we are not going to make a jump like in 1974. We don't want to destroy the world economics." . .

SALISBURY. Rhodesia. March 26 (AP) -- Lieutenant-General Peter Walls, the Rhodesian supreme military commander has warned eastern border farmers to be braced for what he called a otoogy tough month of April in the face of guerrilla threats to sabotage elections.

General Walls also announced further plans to reinforce troops in the field through next month but gave no details. Already the military command has ordered a general mobilisation of most regular and reserve security forces for before and after the elections.
